III. HOUSE-TREE-PERSON TEST (HTPT)

Vanessa's drawing of the house was unusually large, and this indicates aggression, expansive and grandiose tendencies, and feelings of inadequacy with compensatory defenses. The house was also placed on the left side of the paper, and this shows that she is impulsive, frank and emotionally satisfied. The house was close in appearance, and this shows interpersonal warmth. The door was very large, and this shows that she is overly dependent on other. The roof was also emphasized, and this indicates fantasy satisfaction. The roof was over-detailed, and this shows obsessive-compulsive traits. Lastly, the drawing of curtained windows indicates consciously controlled socializing with some anxiety implied.

The drawing of the tree indicates possible aggressive tendencies and over-compensatory action and hypersensitivity, since the tree was very large. The branches were also very faint, and these indicate that she is indecisive and anxious. Lastly, the drawing of fruits indicates that she is very nurturing.

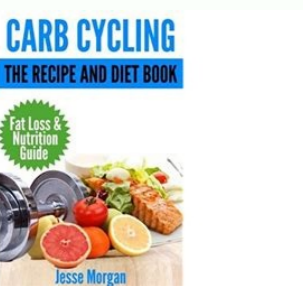

The drawing of the person was unusually large, and this indicates grandiosity. The head was also unusually large. This shows that she has grandiose expansive tendencies and is overly dependent on others. The eyes were also large, and these indicate suspiciousness, possible anxiety and hypersensitive to social opinion. The mouth was also drawn upturned, and this indicates forced congeniality and possible inappropriate affect. The neck was short and thick. This means that she has tendencies to be stubborn and impulsive. The drawing of the fingers also shows possible regressive tendencies, since the fingers were petal-like. Lastly, there was also an emphasis on the feet, since the feet were very large and the shoes were overly-elaborated. This indicate that she has feelings of sexual inadequacy and possible aggressiveness.

In this article, we will show you how to write a book review that draws the attention of readers, while providing useful information, we will also share some common mistakes to avoid while writing book reviews and some a+ book reviews are worth imitating. Why book reviews are important for writers and readers book reviews are valuable for writers: developing a better understanding of what they learned to enhance their own writing skills to develop a critical eye in literature book reviews are also valuable for readers: to learn about the potential reading material to gain an understanding of what the material covers to decide whether to buy u not u read something the best way to think about writing a review is to imagine that you are writing for a reviewYou will have to answer the most important questions that they are and help them decide if it takes the book home or not. 5 Essential steps to write a great book review to take advantage of your book review, follow these 5 simple steps. 1. 1. The most important details define the stage for the remainder of your review, starting with the most important details of the book, make sure to include: genre/type of bookmain character descriptioncontext of the configuration this is also a good place to mention that any content warning that readers can enjoy, these notices mention any sensitive potential topics u discussed in the book u in your book review, providing content notices can help readers choose safe and healthy books for their own needs, for non-fiction reviews, describe the main theme of the book. academic journals may include short book reviews that include which topic the book covers, which questions them u how it approaches the topic. Finally, do not forget to mention the name of the author and what the relevant experience they have. sum up the plot in some sentences, explaining the most important details, give readers a brief synopsis, your summary u sinopse should provide a general idea of what happens in the book. ideally, mention the premise, the inciting event and the dilemma of the protagonist. summarize is important, but do not overreact - you do not want your review to include spoilers u reveal the end! the typical rule to summarize in writing of book review is not to mention things in the plot after the average point.3. write your review of the book praises differs from a book report, because your review should focus mainly on your evaluation of the book itself. that includes praise and criticism. There must also be a balance of your subjective and objective opinions. your review should answer these questions: what did you like the book? Did the characters and the scenario look real to you? the story grabbed him and kept his attention where he should? What were the main themes of the book? the writing style fits intoWhat did you like in writing style? Did the writer use any unique format? For example, it was aor written in epistolary format? An assessment of a book of a fiction should focus on whether the author was able to convincingly sharing his perspective. Did you learn something new? Were the arguments clear and concise? Did you feel persuaded by the conclusion? Share with readers in concise phrases. Write your chronic strings are fancies for some and differing of writing. Regardless of how you feel, it is important to express your discontent constructively, rather than simply complaining about what you liked. Some reviewers make a list and cons with explanations or quotes detailed by highlighting the book's troublesome sections. It is also vital to be specific about what worked for you. eferences "Conou did not work for me" or "I simply could not relate to the main character" can be vamlized, but instill for your readers, Remember - If so many strings are totally subjective, and what a reader does not like may be what makes the same book the favorite of another reader. that exactly you did not related to the main character or why the story has not worked for you. One of the best ways to remember what you like or do not not like a book is noting notes while you wipe. Save your thoughts on-line in a Google document or another writer you like. You can turn these notes into attentive phrases later when writing your review. Offer your recommendation and classification From stars to the last part of a book review is your recommendation. Think of the main conclusions of readers in poten of your review. Would you recommend this book to a friend? Share who you think you would like the book, but also who can not like the book. Readers that information is framed in one of the two categories. Finally, how many stars in 5 or 10 would you give? Don't forgetOffer your logic behind this star rating - and all right as well. The main thing is to tell readers your verdict at the end.5 Common mistakes people make when reviewing books, there are some common mistakes people quality development development development development development development development now refuse to offer a star rating - and all right as well. The main thing is to tell readers your verdict at the end.5 Common mistakes people make when reviewing books, there are some common mistakes people make when writing book reviews. Double-check your review for any of these errors before you publish or send them. Exaggerated claims going too far in one direction or another can make your review seem biased. To maintain a professional tone, avoid superlative claims (for example, "This is the best book of all time). Before publishing, delay your book review or report and ensure that you have rationalized your claims and that they are appropriate.2. Repetitivity you made a question and argued, there is no need to continue repeating throughout the play. Maybe you liked something or didn't like something, but after reading something once or twice, the reader already gets the point. Driving your argument home with so much strength only takes valuable space for more critical points in the review. Make your point once and leave it like this. Making a book review about you should allow readers to see your personal opinion, but they hear objective points as well. Don't flatter yourself with references that only you would understand how you turn off readers who want a review that focuses on the book in question. Remember that the review should serve readers, not you. Be writing your book instead of a review. Sharing the entire plotavoid giving the whole story.You must mention mention focus of history - as if it is a novel u a mystery of murder - be careful to share spoilers. spoilers are any important developments of the plot intended to keep suspense u not mentioned in the editor's summary. Moreover, if you spend much of the review in the summary, you will not get around to review the characters, language, structure u cultural context.5. writing too much the review should not be an accompanying novel, and while a review is intended to share a little more than a statement, the key here is the word "small". you cannot share all the thoughts you had during reading - this is not useful for readers to decide if they will read it u no. then, limit your book review to the main points you want to do in about 500-1000 words. 5 good examples of reviewing books from all over the internet if you are still not sure how to write a useful book review, you may want to check out these examples that we pull from some popular book review sites. goodreads and kirkus are some of the most common places for people to write and share book reviews. If you are looking for inspiration to write a book review, these two sites are a good place to start. 1. the revision of kirkus of genesis begins again by alicia d. williams this summary, but the revision of the book of counting certainly gives readers a clear sense of the world of the main character, but the reasons this book review is especially useful are the ratings of the stars, the shared verdict, and the age recommendation found at the end of the review. 2. roxane gay's goodreads review of the mothers by brit bennettroxane gay's review immediately mentions the main characters and the theme of the mothers, followed by her evaluation of what she did and did not like about the novel, your criticism is followedwis understanding and reasoning and ends with a positive recommendation. Note how gay concisely fits all aspects of a good good into limited sentences that get her points across quickly.3. Book of CimzeAAAs Goodreads review of No Land to Light on by Yara ZgheibAA This review shares a powerful initial reaction in bold eAAA offering enticing expectations and pulling readers in. The summary followed by the emotional impact the novel will make on readers gives a clear sense of what to expect from No Land to Light On. It also mentions the perspective the story is told in, so readers know what to expect.4. TheBibliophileeAAAs review of The Four Winds by Kristin HannahThis review is unique because it is a bit longer, but iteAAAs also conveniently broken up into sections that readers can click on from the top of the page. The personal review can be found between the plot summary and the recommendation where the reviewer describes her experience reading the book. WhatAAAAs valuable for some is that she compares the book with the authorAAAAs previous survival-focused novel, so potential readers can choose between them.5. Reading Middle GradeeAAAAs review of No Place Like HereReading Middle GradeeAAAAs review of No Place Like Here conveniently separates sections of the review so readers can quickly find what theyeAAAAre looking for. It begins with the most important aspects eAAA the main character and plotline and follows with positive feedback and negative feedback under their subheaders. The final section also mentions content that potential readers should be aware of, like parental mental illness and incarceration, and concludes with a recommendation as a summer read.A How Jasper Can Help Write Book ReviewsReady to write your book review?
